In terms of structural outline, the article follows through with clear, concise clarity and logical, rational flow.

The language employed is of good quality with no grammatical or errors in syntax. The writing is demonstrative of a proficient use of the English language.

The content of the paper is congruent with the topic stated. The aspect of strengthening security measures is well aligned with current literature reviews and is relevant to the identified presenting problem.

I would like to see critical commentary on how this paper addresses any gaps in the literature and what is the new contribution made. As well as state limitations, I am concerned that whilst security measures will be enhanced, there is no mention if these new structural developments will in any way compromise patient confidentiality and privacy.
