Dr. Wiqar and Dr. Shifa prescription of corticosteroids for allergic conditions does have a list of documented and proved side effects. Your study does not include the incidence of the type of food / other eating habits and the environment of the patients who have partaken in your study. I believe these are the major factors which will define how long the patient will be suffering as well as their recovery period. Environment, triggering agents screening are some very basic factors which contribute to prolonged shots of allergic reactions.
