The info on the inclusion criteria needs to be expanded - how did you recruit this sample "based on specific criteria: adolescents addicted to online gaming and experiencing insomnia within the past three months."?

The info on the surveys needs to be expanded- how were they modified/adapted? How were they scored, and how were the cut-offs for mild/moderate etc decided upon?

Crucially it is not clear how these categories map onto the mild vs severe used in Results. You really need to explain you analysis approach.

And you say "Table 3 presents a significant correlation between online gaming addiction and the instances of insomnia among adolescents, with a notable p of 0.026." But this looks like a contingency table, so you should use a chi-sq test.
