The article does not seem to be a research paper. It is a collection of generalities about agriculture and its main issues.

The papers seems more a dissemination than a research article. However, it would need: a) a justification of the importance of the problem; b) research questions; c) a state of art not merely based on documents of local authors; d) hypothesis and methods; e) empirical data; f) policy implications. I would suggest the author to withdraw the paper and to rebuild. Take care of the drafting and the grammar. If the topic is strategic management, please clarify if you refer to the enterprise or to the government policies. In both cases, undertake a previous review of literature.
