

Review of: "What do different perspectives on epistemology tell us about teaching and learning?"

Nikoletta Agonács¹

¹ Universidade de Lisboa

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Hi! I find the discussion very interesting and current. The text is well-written in terms of English grammar. I leave here below some observations and suggestions for the author to contemplate:

- I find the title not very indicative of the content of the paper. The essence of the paper is discussing the conceptualization of knowledge and how the different views can impact teaching practices. I would recommend rephrasing the title to be more indicative of the content.
- The text starts in medias res, I would recommend including an introductory paragraph about the context: why is this discussion important, how this discussion adds to the body of knowledge and why is it currently important?
- I would also recommend separating the text with headers, it would improve readability.
- I find the argumentation weak about the suggestions (what teachers and students should do) so I would recommend using references to better sustain the presented ideas.