This article points out the potential problems in the academic community, which are worth discussing. Here are my thoughts and suggestions.

Firstly, I believe that the viewpoints in this article are mostly based on the author's experiences and speculations. It would be even better if strong reference materials, data support and other arguments were provided. This can enhance the credibility and persuasion of the article.

Secondly, the final suggestions are not detailed enough and do not address all the drawbacks mentioned by the author. Some of the suggestions themselves also have flaws and may give rise to new problems. The author could delve deeper into finding solutions.

Lastly, the article lacks definitions and consistency in some of the terminology and concepts, which makes it slightly confusing. The author could define and unify these terms to improve clarity.
