An interesting read. The background, method and literature review were good, just a few readjustments are required for the results and discussion segments.

I would suggest that the results section be subdivided by subheading addressing, e.g., demographic characteristics and health status of respondents, vaccine acceptance and their determinants.

Presentation of results should be restricted to the results segment of the article. Thus, table 3 and other results reported in the discussion should be taken to the result part of the article. Discussion should capture the general findings without reporting numbers and relate that to existing literature (this was done, but with results reported again)
