

Review of: "Geopolitical constructs of international politics - their cultural & ideological roots"

Christian Acevedo-Navas¹

¹ Escuela Superior de Guerra

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

It seems like a very good manuscript to me. Despite being synthetic, that is, relatively short (maybe it's better that way), it manages to sufficiently address the elements of the historical context on the international system, which allow the reader to frame themselves in the topic on one hand, and understand the reflection that the author proposes on the other. I really liked the document.