

Review of: "[Research Note] Dengue – Therapeutic Efforts in Mexico"

Ricardo Lemes Gonçalves<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Universidade Federal de Jataí

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

A mini-review is the most appropriate format for the information presented here. However, there is a lack of structure and quality in each of the following 3 basic premises:

"Critical Analysis: Critically analyze the collected literature, identifying key themes, developments, and gaps in the existing research. Your analysis should not just summarize the literature but also provide a critical evaluation of the findings.

Synthesis of Information: Synthesize the information from your literature review to present a cohesive narrative. This should include drawing connections between different studies, discussing contradictions, and highlighting significant trends or patterns.

Conclusions and Future Directions: Conclude your mini-review by summarizing the main findings and suggesting potential areas for future research. This section should reflect on the implications of the review for the field and propose new questions or hypotheses that arise from your analysis."