

Review of: "From Isolation to Acceptance: Improving Social Acceptance and Educational Opportunities for Transgender People in Pakistan"

Muqaddas Butt¹

¹ University of Education

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Here is my feedback on certain sections/aspects of the paper:

Title of the Paper

The research paper addresses an important and underexplored issue in academia and society at large. The title is clear and relevant to current societal challenges, particularly regarding marginalized communities. The subject matter is timely, important, and deserving of thorough academic exploration.

Since this research paper delimits itself to transgender educational opportunities, particularly school education, it could have been better to take into account technical and vocational education as well. This could help to encompass all opportunities for learning available to the transgender community.

Introduction and Literature Review

The introduction successfully highlights the significance of transgender issues in both social acceptance and education, providing a strong rationale for the study.

Methodology

The methodology appears to be sound; however, due to the delimitation of the research population/participants, there is less likelihood for the generalization of the research findings.

Analysis

The analysis of barriers to social acceptance and educational opportunities is thorough, and the discussion of systemic challenges is well-articulated.