

Review of: "Factors contributing to labour unrest at the garment factories in Bangladesh: A cross-sectional study"

S.J. Cha<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Mokpo National University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The significance of this study is that it studied the factors that cause labor unrest among garment factory workers in Bangladesh, which plays a major role in global garment production. In the conclusion section, it is necessary to be more specific about the suggestions for eliminating labor unrest among garment factory workers in Bangladesh through this study. I would also appreciate it if you could compare the differences between previous studies and this study and highlight the significance and value of the study. I hope that you can also present the direction of future research together. Thank you for your research.