

Review of: "Perceptions and Experiences of Human Right Violations of People Living with Mental Illness: A multi-centre descriptive cross-sectional study in Nigeria"

Dr S.Kavitha Kavitha¹

¹ Saveetha University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

1. The title is comprehensive and accurately reflects the study's focus. However, consider adding a concise subtitle to provide more context or specify the methodology.
2. The abstract gives a clear overview, but it would benefit from summarizing key findings and implications more explicitly.
3. The study's cross-sectional design is appropriate for the research questions, but it would be helpful to discuss potential limitations associated with this design.
4. The inclusion of four mental health facilities across different regions enhances the study's generalizability. However, discussing the rationale for selecting these specific facilities would strengthen the methodology section.
5. The sampling techniques are well explained, but it would be beneficial to provide more details on how the minimum sample size was determined using Slovin's formula. Clarify how the 10% added for non-response rate was calculated.
6. The statistical methods used for data analysis are appropriate, but consider providing more details on the specific statistical tests employed for each analysis, especially in hypothesis testing.
7. The demographic information is presented clearly, but including visual aids such as tables or graphs could enhance the reader's understanding.
8. The association between socio-demographic characteristics and perception of human rights is an important finding. Provide a more nuanced discussion, including potential reasons for these associations.
9. The discussion is comprehensive and highlights the significance of the findings. Consider providing more context by comparing or contrasting your results with existing literature on mental health human rights violations.
10. The conclusion appropriately summarizes the key findings. It may be useful to restate the implications of the study and suggest avenues for future research.
11. Overall, the study contributes valuable insights into the perceptions and experiences of human rights violations among people living with mental illness in Nigeria. Addressing the above points would enhance the manuscript's clarity.