Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The author seems to have a basic idea that is good enough to be raised as a research topic. The author expresses her concern regarding the low reading interest of Indonesians, which is connected with developing the nation's future character in the era of technological advancement. However, apart from the many grammatical errors and formatting errors in references, this manuscript still needs much improvement.

First, the content of the abstract does not convey a summary of the research: its background, design, methods, way of analyzing data, and conclusions from the research. Second, in the first paragraph, the author has conveyed a definition from a source (even though the source is valid), which was not explained before. What is KBBI?

Third, in the Introduction sub-chapter, the author conveys too many definitions where the author does not further convey the relevance of each of these definitions with the background of why the author is interested in researching the topic reflected in the research title.

The researcher should first explain the background or reasons why she asked the research question. This is not explained in the Introduction sub-chapter. As a result, the research questions do not seem to be connected properly with the Introduction which should contain research reasons.

In the research methods sub-chapter, the author should separate the research design and the research method. It seems that the author mixes these two meanings. The author should also briefly explain the number of samples used and how to obtain these samples. Furthermore, the author should also explain how to analyze the data obtained.

Because the Introduction, research questions, and research method sub-chapters are not well connected, the results, discussion, and conclusion sub-chapters are not well connected.

Finally, the author should improve coherency or continuity between paragraphs, correct grammatical errors, and improve how to cite and write reference format.
