

Review of: "A Dataset of Small-Mammal Detections in West Africa and Their Associated Micro-Organisms"

Ferhat Matur¹

¹ Dokuz Eylül University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The popularity of the One Health approach has increased, especially after the pandemic. Accordingly, the health of the ecosystem is important for protecting the health of every species. In this context, every piece of data that can be collected is important. Therefore, the datasets provided by researchers also constitute a valuable dataset. Data coming from the African continent in particular are more sensitive due to the fact that they are the origin centers of many species. In addition, the collection of information about the continent will also increase the scientific knowledge accumulation of countries and will be important in future projects/studies. Therefore, I believe that the dataset is suitable for publication

Minor suggestion: Could you please mention your objectives at the end of the introduction section?