Dear Dr. Marinello,

Thank you for inviting me to review this paper. I appreciate the aims of this journal-project. it would be interesting to see how this develops in the future.

As far as the paper, it is a no go, neither on actual old-fashioned journals or here. It is not clear what is the format chosen by the author. What is this? A review article? A commentary? An editorial? The length and scientific content is approximately that of a Facebook post, with the body barely being longer than the abstract. The author tries to address this issue by citing a total of 14 papers, making it sound like an abstract for a longer article.

The scientific content is worthless as the author provides no novelty in this subject, which is much better explained in other places anyways. Perhaps the author wanted to bring up an hypothesis? However, there is no summarization or understanding given to the reader, nor the hypothesis is sufficiently backed up.

I suggest a threshold to be set to what is published on this platform. Social medias have already done enough damage (personal opinion of the reviewer)
