The topic of this paper is interesting and deals with a field not widely discussed until now. In essence, it is an exploratory study that uses a methodology that is perhaps a bit simple to be published in a prestigious journal. Furthermore, in some parts the length is a bit excessive, especially in the abstract and conclusions. An important weakness is that relatively little academic literature is used in the review and the results are not well related to the cited literature. Finally, indicate that the graphs seem dispensable, since the tables contain enough information.
