Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The paper explores the relationship between entrepreneurship, radicalization, and corruption in Morocco. It highlights the negative impact of low trust in the government and perceived corruption on entrepreneurship and economic development. The study also reveals that high indignation towards the government plays a crucial role in people's intention to take arms. The findings suggest that teaching moral values and encouraging peaceful means of voicing concerns against irregularities in establishments could help address corruption. The study has theoretical and managerial implications for boosting entrepreneurship and curbing radicalization.

However, there are few suggestions that might help the authors:

- 1) It is good to have support of the theory to strengthen the arguments made.
- 2) Please include the justification of sample size selection.
- 3) Some of the sentences have few incorrect grammar & spelling. Try to improve that.

The rest are good reading.
