The article is a very interesting one and even has some missing ideas, it has a lot of scientific structure. I didn't quite get the methodology because it focused more on how the quantitative part was done and very few about the interviews. I think the authors should explain more about that and how they created the questionnaire and guide of the interviews so it gets all more understandable.

In the conclusion they could use more material and give a final conclusion that helps as a general closure of the article.
