The authors have made a good attempt to assess the factors affecting the social outreach of microfinance institutions in Ethiopia. A regression model has been used for the analysis. They have used many explanatory variables in the model. I suggest the authors to test for multicollinearity as well. Keeping in view the influence of multicollinearity in multiple regression, a test for multicollinearity will enhance the quality of the work. Overall, the study is a nice contribution to the literature and is worth publishing.
