

Review of: "[Commentary] Recognising and Managing Medical Issues in Neurodiverse Females"

Noor Azzizah Omar¹

¹ Universiti Sains Islam Malaysia

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Review of: [Commentary] Recognising and Managing Medical Issues in Neurodiverse Females Version 1, 4/18/2023

Firstly, I would like to congratulate the author for writing the article and for pointing out a different aspect of challenges that are faced by neurodivergent females in comparison to males. I have some points that I would like to offer:

1. The title of the article could be misleading to the future reader, as it mentioned recognizing and managing the medical issue of neurodivergent female patients. However, the content of the article focused more on the challenges faced by them. Probably would be benefited from rephrasing the title.
2. The definition of neurodivergent is rather vague. There is no mention of all types of neurodivergent types or mention regarding the diagnostic criteria. Each of the diversity has its own linked diseases or risk factors. Hence the following content could result in generalization.
3. The 'healthcare need' and 'physical health issue' section is rather redundant and could be summarized and rearranged accordingly.
4. The sentence structure should be reorganized. Some pieces of information that were cited could be analyzed critically and summarized.
5. The last reference is from Twitter seems odd. The author should review the reference list and find the original source that is validated.