

Review of: "[Commentary] Service Sector Work Under Pressure From New Technologies and Artificial Intelligence – Lessons From a Number of Foresight Studies"

Stanislaw Legutko<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Technical University of Poznan

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The statement presented as a comment is factual and timely. The study concerns the very interesting issue of the impact of new technologies and AI on the services sector. I agree with the author that the social context means that these new forms of work can be difficult to adapt to, ensuring workers' health, and that the increasing deployment of artificial intelligence can multiply the number of such cases in the years to come, so we need to be vigilant about the changes in the daily lives of service workers that will ensue.