

Review of: "Sustainable Agriculture and Climate Resilience in Türkiye: A Comprehensive Analysis"

Merve Yazar Yıldıztekin¹

¹ Gazi University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Abstract is too long like an introduction section whereas introduction section is only consisted of background. The methodology, findings, and contribution to the existed literature don't take place in the Introduction section. Moreover the study is not discussing the existed researches in this field. There is no literature review in the study.

"Thorough research methodology" may not be the true term. I suggest the author to use "Comprehensive research methodology" term instead.

I couldn't see any reference in the first five paragraphs of the Introduction Section.

The study seems to me like a summary of some national reports. It is not like a research which should have a scientific value. Especially the second section is too way long and like the report was copied without any touch. Those paragraphs may be scrutinesed and the ones that are really necessary for the aim of the study might be used. Moreover some paragraphs include very technical data. If they have critical importance for the compatibility of the study they may be showed in a table and summarized.

References are very limited they should be enhanced and the study doesn't give the results that it promises in the abstract.