The study titled "A Survey Study on Women Entrepreneurship in the BTR Area of Assam" aims to investigate the landscape of women entrepreneurship in the Bodoland Territorial Region (BTR) of Assam. However, the article falls short in providing a clear research problem that necessitates the exploration of women entrepreneurship in this specific region. While the study sets three objectives, these objectives lack substantiation or rationale, leaving readers questioning their relevance. Furthermore, the positioning of the objectives after the literature review is unconventional and disrupts the logical flow of the research. The conclusions drawn in the study appear disconnected from the findings, as there is a lack of cohesive analysis tying back to the established objectives. A more integrated approach is required to strengthen the correlation between the study's objectives, literature review, and ultimate conclusions.
