

Review of: "Improving agriculture and food security in Africa: Can the one health approach be the answer?"

Melisew Lemma¹

¹ Hawassa University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article dealt with a relevant topic, focusing on pressing issues of agriculture and food security in sub-Saharan Africa.

It seems to pick up an appealing topic for a potential generic reader with an interest on the nexus between agriculture and food security from a one health perspective. The teaming up of various scholars of multidisciplinary background consolidated the synthesis of the three major themes (agriculture-food security-health) the article was destined to chart. The authors succeeded in delineating the conceptual as well as the geographical focus of the study within the limits of the space for such an article. However, The article could have been strengthened if the authors justified as to how they selected resources for their review. Further, the study could have been consolidated if more studies of academic rigor were reviewed rather than depending substantially on information from grey literature produced by non-academic organizations.