

Review of: "Artificial Intelligence & Nature-Based Solutions in Agriculture: A BT Cotton Pest Management Case Study in India"

Mohammad Sharifi¹

¹ University of Tehran

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Following are my suggestions:

The abstract should be concise and to the point. Moreover, appropriate and extensive key words must be included to make the study lucrative and comprehensive.

The introduction portion has poor write-up grammatically (having lots of hypos, omissions, and ...) and needs to be rewritten and cited accordingly after each para or sentence, whichever is convenient.

The data presented as references must be in tabular form with proper citations, and the latest citations are admirable to make the study more informative and worthwhile.

Although authors generated plentiful data, it was presented poorly; the methodology, results, and discussion should be appended separately.

No graphical representation is included with proper error bars and indexing.

No conclusion is included; it needs to be added for potential readers and scholars.