

Review of: "Road Safety Perceptions and Practices among Undergraduate Medical Students"

Živana Slović¹

¹ University of Kragujevac

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The work is good, I think it should be accepted. In the years when traffic accidents have an epidemic character, preventive action in all fields is very important, especially among the young population, which belongs to the most vulnerable group of people.

The introduction is clear, the most important problems related to traffic are highlighted.

The methodology can be slightly improved, in terms of additional clarifications.

The results are well presented in a very interesting way and the tables are clear and precise.

The discussion follows the results and everything is clearly presented.

Conclusions and Recommendations highlighted the essence of the work in the best way.