

Review of: "[Commentary] Decentralization — “The Fundamental Challenge in the Pakistan Is the Decentralization of Health Care”"

Ittipong Khemapech<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> University of the Thai Chamber of Commerce

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This article focuses on the current situations and needs for healthcare decentralization in Pakistan. It is always great to have articles reflecting the problems, limitations, and opportunities of healthcare systems, which are one of the most important infrastructures of every country.

An overview of the healthcare system in Pakistan is well described, together with a broad picture of how decentralization will improve people's quality of lives.

Hope to see more details of how the healthcare system could be transformed into a decentralized one. Some key content includes proposed stages of the transformations, possible barriers, some details of successful cases, and several ideas (or concrete policies or actions) to achieve the goals.