

Review of: "Reflections on Bordering, Micropolitics and Everyday Life in Peacebuilding Processes: Revisiting the Lingering Legacy of the 1949 Armistice Agreements"

Sujit Lahiry¹

¹ Panjab University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Max Stephenso Jr and Laura Zanolini, 'Reflections on Bordering, Micropolitics and Everyday Life in Peacebuilding Processes: Revisiting the Lingering Legacy of the 1949 Armistice Agreements'.

Review by Dr. Sujit Lahiry.

This article by two seasoned academics throws light on micropolitics (as, for example, emotional recognition) and everyday life in peacebuilding processes through the prisms of the 1949 Armistice Agreements. They examine how autoethnography has influenced such encounters along the border conflict in East Jerusalem. The authors have used an extensive literature review to justify their contention. They talk about the question of agency in development, peacebuilding, and international politics. The authors have done complete justice to the subject under review.

Therefore, this reviewer recommends this article for publication in Qeios.