

Review of: "Narrative Medicine: Enhancing End-of-Life Care with Literary Stories"

Sharon Ruston<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Lancaster University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I'm not entirely sure that I am the best person to review this piece (perhaps I shouldn't have accepted the task). I am an English Literature professor, and this is not the kind of writing I am used to reviewing. That said, there are a few things that I can confidently comment upon; for example, there are a number of typographical and other errors in this piece (such as spelling mistakes like 'advicing author', 'Anay Cristinay Herreros', grammatical errors, e.g., 'to care their peers', 'Mrs Claudia' when presumably Claudia is a first name?), which do need to be corrected before final publication. I also think that the point of the article could be made clearer. More could be said about why these narratives would be helpful to healthcare professionals. I am sure that it will be of interest to those who work in these professions to see the kinds of narratives that could be used.