Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This work deals with a comprehensive analysis of Approval Voting (AV) and its superiority over other voting systems. Three virtues of AV are outlined and argued. The results show that AV emerges as a strong option for realizing democratic will.

First of all, I would like to congratulate the author on this peculiar research. The manuscript is quite interesting and has some value.

I would just like to make a few observations and suggestions for the authors to contemplate:

1. Inserting endnotes can perhaps be a bit chaotic as the references are all positioned at the end. Perhaps it would have been more effective to insert them as footnotes.
2. The references are a bit few. In my opinion, there should be at least thirty.
3. It is not very clear what the contribution of the paper is.
4. In the end, perhaps it can be useful to include a short paragraph in which limitations and future developments are provided.
5. The last comment concerns the use of the first person throughout the manuscript; perhaps it would be better to make the entire text impersonal.

Finally, I would like to thank you for the opportunity to review and comment on this research, and I think addressing the above-mentioned aspects can strengthen this investigation.
