

Review of: "Determinants of Women Entrepreneurs' Business Performance: Evidence from Micro and Small-Scale Enterprises in Arba Minch Town, Southern Ethiopia"

Ilyia Syafiqah Abdul Malik<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Multimedia University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

1. Some of the citations are out of date. Example "Yet, as the field continues to develop and mature, there are increasingly strong calls for scholars to take their research in new directions (Karen et al., 2012)." This is a critical statement to summarize the importance of new directions in this sector. Furthermore, it is not firmly supported by recent reference.
2. Inconsistency is a term. The article's title refers to women. However, the term female can also be used to refer to a woman. To standardize, I would advise authors to use a single phrase (woman).
3. The study's conceptual framework does not explain the relationships between the independent variables and the dependent variables.
4. No theory has been explored in the literature to provide support for this investigation.
5. The conclusion of the study can be further elaborated upon and linked back to the literature review that was mentioned in section 2.