

Review of: "Encounters with Others: Student Growth through Fieldwork Studies in Rural Areas"

Camelia Schiopu¹

¹ University "Transilvania" of Brasov

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article titled "Encounters with Others: Student Growth through Fieldwork Studies in Rural Areas" presents the methodology of fieldwork studies, the impact of rural experiences on students' perceptions, the role of community engagement, challenges faced, and the overall outcomes in terms of student learning and development which is a significant topic.

The theoretical background has been established by citing the appropriate literature, which tells us that the author has studied the works published so far.

The figure 1 is not easy to understand. Maybe it would have been easier to read if crosses had been used instead of white color and vice versa.

It doesn't exist a methodology section of the paper.

There are no Conclusions.

The manuscript needs few reviews.