This review article is a study compiling only the effectiveness of Solanum nigrum. To evaluate the pharmacological properties of a molecule or plant, it is necessary to discuss it in terms of effects, side effects, and dose. The content of the article does not contain enough information to cover the term "pharmacological" in the title. The fact that adverse effects are not included in the article causes the misconception that the plants have miraculous properties. For a more scientific and objective compilation, the adverse effects of the plants should be mentioned, as well as their effects, in the manuscript.
