Dear authors,

Unfortunately, according to my humble opinion your article has to be significantly reformulated to be scientifically significant. The theme is attractive and up to date, but it seems like the article has been pulled out from larger segment. That could be reason for absence of explanation of some important issues. The regression model is not clearly explained and some events has to be explained in details (research data is not available).

The size of the sample is too small and could be compromised by direct authors influence. Some data in the text and belonging tables have different values.

The literature is insufficient to cover the desired area of review, so it should be expanded with relevant sources.

The publishing criterions (terminology, style and language) are not fulfilled so this segment has to be changed.

I hope that mentioned comments could be useful for further article improvement.

So, the article needs serious revision to be accepted.
