Potential competing interests: Injury

This article describes pre-dinking and drinking games among undergraduate students in several countries in the UK, Singapore and the mainland Europe. The introduction was written well but this is too long and it needs to summarize in two or three paragraphs. The abstract need to more precise details about study design, sample size, and data analysis. Some sentences are vague and could be written more clearly. Conclusions from the present study should be made with caution due to low sample size for an international study.
