I am sending a short review of the article, "Motivational Variables as Predictors of Academic Achievement Among University Students."

The article and problem are interesting, but not new. The author's introduction is good, and the researched text is correct. The problem is interesting, but not something new. It represents findings that could be discussed by comparing them to other similar research.

The procedure needs some minor corrections: in the chapter on instruments, the measuring instrument is not enough correctly defined (please write more about the measured subscales). All other things are quite good and appropriate.

Results are correct; also, the discussion is fine. The article can be accepted after minor corrections. I don't need to approve it again.
