The article is well written and articulating agricultural aspect in relation to health issues and as whether this is can be seen as a single approach to resolve various underlying challenges. In my view the topic is quite relevant due to the fact that it triggers conversations for further understanding the relationship between agricultural products and health issues.

However, on the organisational presentation of the article I would want to see clear introduction and background of the article, literature review, research methodology that was applied, discussion of findings and recommendations (conclusion).

The literature review should also highlight clearly the underlying challenges and including the effects of climate change which is seen as serious threat on the agricultural products and how this can be mitigated. Despite of all these, the article is publishable with minor adjustments.
