This paper was written well. It respects the complexity of Jung's thoughts on the vast topic of the meaning of life. A lot of research was summarized thoughtfully in a way that was well organized. Many multidimensional strands of Jung's thinking have been braided well for the reader to appreciate. In addition, this paper takes the spirit of Jung's coincidentia oppositorum to interpret Jung's thinking on this topic. The many direct quotations is a strength of the article since they support the author's points well.

Occasionally, on minor points, it seemed that some of the flow of the paper seemed slightly messy, but this wasn't a major flaw to the article's overall presentation.
