

Review of: "Honorary Authorship in Biomedical Journals: The Endless Story"

Comfort Tetteh Dede

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Honorary authorship is an important subject to discuss at this present time due to the popularity grounds it's gaining. This piece of writing qualifies for editorial writing but not an article since it presents just the author's viewpoint but not employing any methodological approach to obtaining data and analyzing to add information or knowledge to what is already known about the subject. The author has done well by highlighting the subject, however, the author could have done a scoping review to map the evidence available or done some comparisons in different fields, geographical areas, and career levels involved. This could have added new information to what is already known. In summary, although it is a good viewpoint, it does not qualify to be published as an article.