This paper focuses an important but relatively less studied concerns for global small-scale and commercial fisheries. However, I think there is a bit mismatch between result and discussion sections. While the result section mainly presented distribution of global literatures on mental health of fishers, the discussion mainly presented different aspects mental health status in fisheries. In my opinion, the author(s) could presented the findings (based on first two aims) in the result section, then critically analyse the findings and interpret causes for global disparities in fisheries mental health literature.
