Language is a manifestation of creativity and the dystopian concepts and feeds that have engulfed the minds have indeed contributed to the death of the language. The digital technology has though bought about a revolution in understanding language learning. The perspective to learn and use English though seems to be contemporary with the digital media yet it has degraded the language to a large extent. The feeds have made the young minds to be more imaginative and less creative. The answers that one looks for is more through the feeds that which is imprinted in the minds. The rampant use of internet with all its positivity is ironically making the society at large with errors and mistakes as the mindset is of CCP that is cut copy and paste rather than CCP that is create comprehend and post. The ethos and the pathos of the learners is impregnated with errors and mistakes. The squeezing of the words which distorts not only the words but at the same time is found to be a replacement for the meaningful words. The understanding of 3W concept of what when and why is now puts one to think What Went Wrong. Indeed the beauty and grace of the language is fading away into oblivion.
