This article provides much information about pela gandong as anthropological knowledge. However, academic research requires a debate based on similar previous research to obtain more exciting information and bring a discourse unique to this field. I have yet to find that in this article. For further improvements, it is better to focus on this material. Furthermore, this article does not explicitly state the research objectives to be achieved. The reader wonders where the information provided will be directed because too many captures do not converge to a more specific conclusion. For that, try to pay attention to this. Besides that, I am still unsure whether Pela Gandong and Christian Education have a beneficial relationship because more explicit arguments have not supported them.
