

Review of: "Identifying Psychological Distress Patterns during the COVID-19 Pandemic using an Intersectional Lens"

Naresh Poondla

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

1. The author need to provide briefly why tree-based methods are well suited for your research question, especially in handling interactions among multiple variables.
2. It might be useful to include a brief section highlighting the limitations of your study, such as the cross-sectional nature of the data and potential biases.
3. The author need to consider discussing potential future research directions that could build upon your findings, especially in terms of mental health interventions or policies.
4. The author needs to consider adding a concluding paragraph that sums up the key findings, implications, and the overall contribution of your study to the field of mental health research during the pandemic.