This is an interesting article. It offered an insightful analysis of the Kardashian reality TV show from a Christian viewpoint. The title of the article is academic and suitable for the study explored. This article has an aim and an identifiable statement of the problem. The methodology employed is suitable for the article and well applied. The language of the article is very academic; the literature used is contemporary and located within the argument of the article. The conclusion of the article is based on its argument, and the argument is sustainable.

There are other observations made during the review:

Use of Wikipedia: Some journals do not accept sources from Wikipedia. So I do not know if it is the same with this journal.

Figure 1: The pie chart used is not well presented in the work.

Referencing: Abadía and Segarra (2023), as cited in the work, should be included in the referencing list.

Finally, coming to a country where 'The reality TV show "Keeping Up with the Kardashians" (KUWK)' is not common, there is a need that the writer should provide additional details about the television program for readers who may not be acquainted with it. This will assist those unfamiliar with the show and underscore your arguments.
