Thank you for the valuable work you have done. It is evident that the main purpose of your study is to influence the status quo of the education in your country and as such, it is precious. Policymakers can play important roles in providing for technologically adequate educational conditions where everyone can enjoy updated and up-grated education. Digital skills are important and they should be fostered in students and teachers in developing countries. You have supported this fact through your study.

It is good that you have based your research on some learning theories. The study follows a logical process and stands within a quantitative framework.
