Thank you for the chance given to contribute to such scholarly works. Going through this pleased my heart for the timely outburst of this work and how it fits into its context. The dynamism should not end in the Case of Nigeria but fill the continent of Africa. My observations are in 3 folds:

A. Overall Observations:

I must applaud the authors of this academic piece of work, it is so enriching and with plenty of insight policy suggestions that can pave and unravel the potentials in Nigeria, Africa and beyond. The article seek to examine the role of national and institutional qualities (institutions per se) in shaping an economy like that of Nigeria. Authors have put forth well documented reviews of 10 articles from 2012 to present. Well done to authors, but let's see what is in the paper more specifically.

B. Specific Observations:

Some specific flaws to be considered by authors may that:

1. Recheck the paper for grammatical issues and scholarly presentations. E.g. using singularly pronounce in the place of plurals (the researcher instead of researchers; line 1 of section 2) ...according to (Yahya and Yamin, 2014) in line 2 section 2.2 is not scholarly citation format, the acknowledgement section of the essay should be reviewed; audience don't know if authors wanted to say ...the gods or thank God, may be it should be ...I would like to thank the Atlantic..., etc.
2. The structure of the policy showcase section may be restructured by not numbering but using paragraphing for each idea or dynamic bulleting than numbering that reduces the readability of the paper
3. One aspect i awaited was to hear how these institutions in Africa and Nigeria curbed and/or manage external shucks like the dying health Pandemic of the COVID-19, may be authors could considered inculcating such an area in previewing how nations and institutions in Nigeria during or after the this health issues contributed to development. Better still highlighting it in the limitation and future perspective may add more value to the essay.
4. May be a graphical presentation of a conceptualized model may be great and spice up the theoretical or empirical evidence of literature.

C. Appraisal:

The readability and impact of the article may be so great if the flaws highlighted are considered.
