I found the article very interesting; it provides valuable information about many of the psychedelics found in nature, their history, and uses.

Despite this, I found the order of the information a little confusing. I would modify the title since it seems too general, and I would change it to something more related to the main plants studied, mandrake and peyote. I would also add chemical structures of the main secondary metabolites mentioned in order to have an idea of what type of compounds they are.
