This is a valuable study as it has short and long term implications on the learning and life outcomes of students. After going through this manuscript, I make the following observations for the authors' consideration;

1. I would like to think that the demographic information such as participants' religion and parents' marital status has no implication to study findings. As such, this information can be removed.
2. The section on the implications to nursing practice seems misplaced.
3. Discussion on the two hypothesis is inadequate.
4. The manuscript has some language issues and hence the suggestion that it be subjected to a language editor.
