

Peer Review

Review of: "A Review of Transformation and Digital Literacy for the Sustainable Development in the Greater Mekong Subregion – Working Paper"

Yarnaphat Shaengchart¹

1. Rangsit University, Thailand

This working paper, titled A Review of Transformation and Digital Literacy for the Sustainable Development in the Greater Mekong Subregion, is an interesting work. The abstract appears to be a good summary of the review, and it effectively communicates the core themes, objectives, and potential impact of the work. However, it's essential to ensure that the actual content of the review aligns with the promises made in the abstract. In addition, if your paper includes specific research findings or references to support the points made in the conclusion, it's a good practice to include relevant citations to back up your claims and lend credibility to your conclusions. Moreover, while you've explained the importance of transformation and digital literacy, it might be beneficial to include some actionable recommendations for policymakers, stakeholders, or practitioners in the GMS region to consider when implementing sustainable development initiatives.

Declarations

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.