

Review of: "[Commentary] The Polyfollicular Anovulatory Androgenic Syndrome: A New Label for an Old Syndrome"

Berna Dilbaz

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The authors suggest a new nomenclature for polycystic ovarian syndrome based on the fact that hyperandrogenism and anovulation are the main characteristics of this syndrome. However if the diagnosis of this syndrome is based on Rotterdam Criteria there will be a group of women who are either normoandrogenic or normoovulatory. The authors should rationalize the proposed nomenclature based on this fact and explain whether they want to exclude the women who are normoandrogenic from the PCOS group as proposed by some societies.